Keystone Family Housing Partners

Housing stability takes more than a move-in

KEYSTONE FAMILY HOUSING PARTNERS

Every family, a home to build on

October 2026

A move-in is a beginning

A lease starts housing stability; practical support helps families work toward keeping it.

Pair a home with practical support

If Keystone helps families move quickly into permanent housing with time-limited rent assistance, move-in essentials, and voluntary, individualized case management, then families can settle into housing and address barriers that threaten stability. This support is intended to help families remain housed after assistance ends…

WHAT WE DO

- Identify apartments and help families move into permanent housing
- Pay security deposits and first month's rent, then step down rent help for up to 12 months
- Offer voluntary, individualized Stay Housed case management through home visits; frequency is adjusted…

WHAT CHANGES FIRST

- Families move from homelessness into permanent housing
- Families report greater confidence taking a next step to address a rent or landlord issue
- Parents report feeling more in control and less stressed

WHAT LASTS

- Families remain housed after time-limited rental assistance ends
- Fewer families return to homelessness or shelter

A promising signal from matched responses

participants

20

answered both surveys

85%

improved in confidence

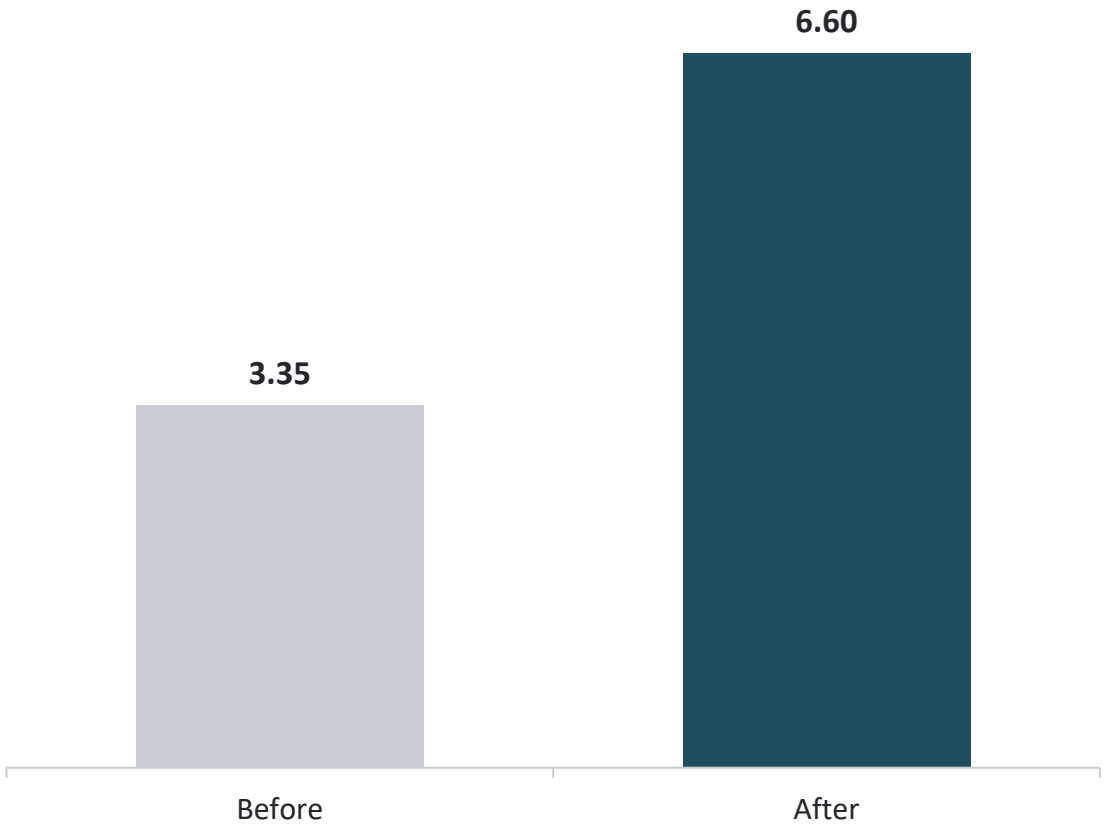

More participants reported improvement

Among participants who answered both surveys, improvement was most common in confidence addressing a rent or landlord issue.

Among participants with both a pre and a post answer. 'Improved' means at least 1 point higher on rating scales, or moving from no to yes.

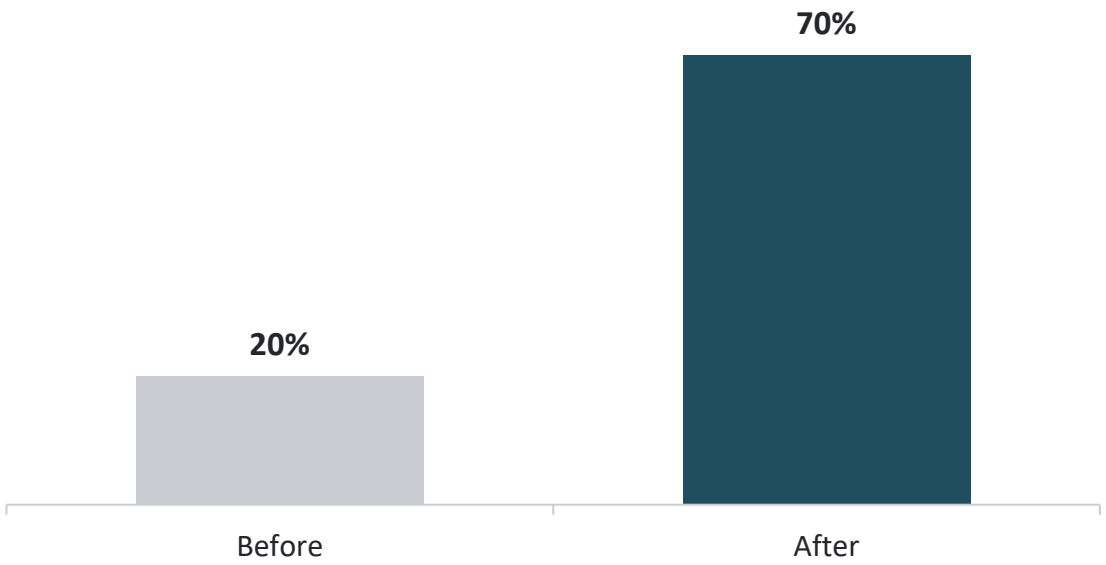

Confidence addressing housing issues rose

Participants who answered both surveys reported higher average confidence taking a next step on a rent or landlord issue.

20 participants answered both pre and post.

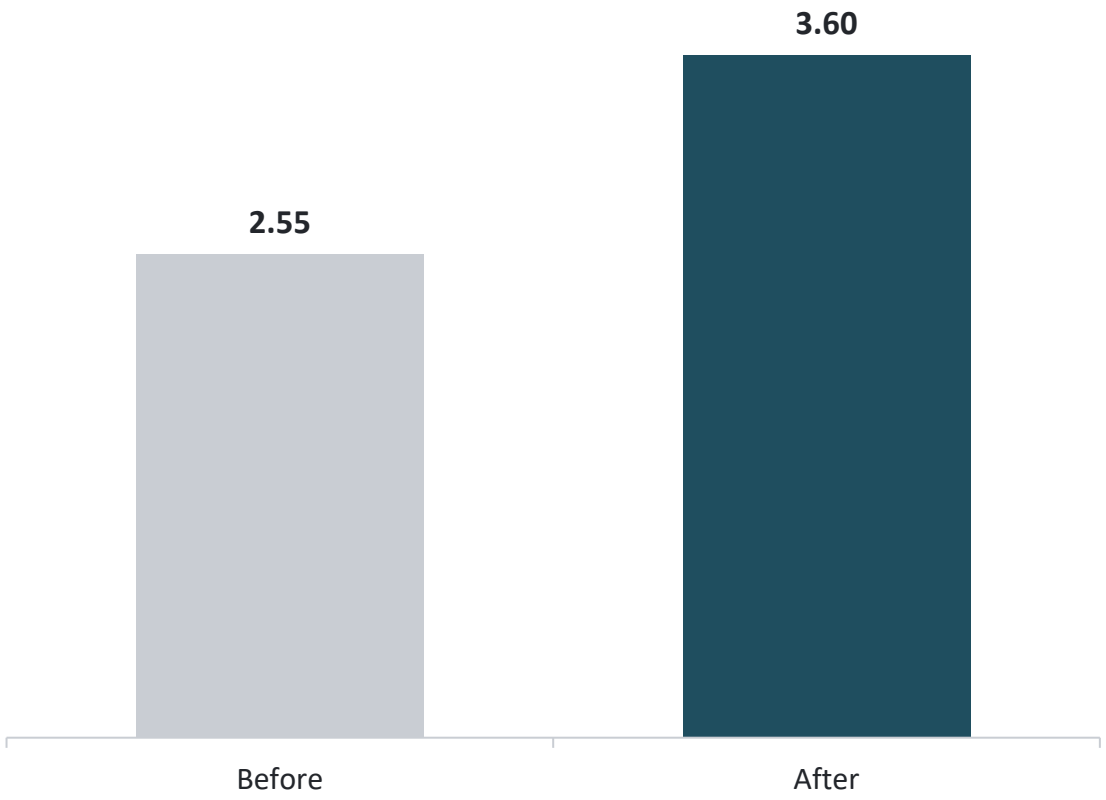

More knew where to seek help

The share answering yes about where to seek help for a chosen need rose from 20% to 70%.

20 participants answered both pre and post.

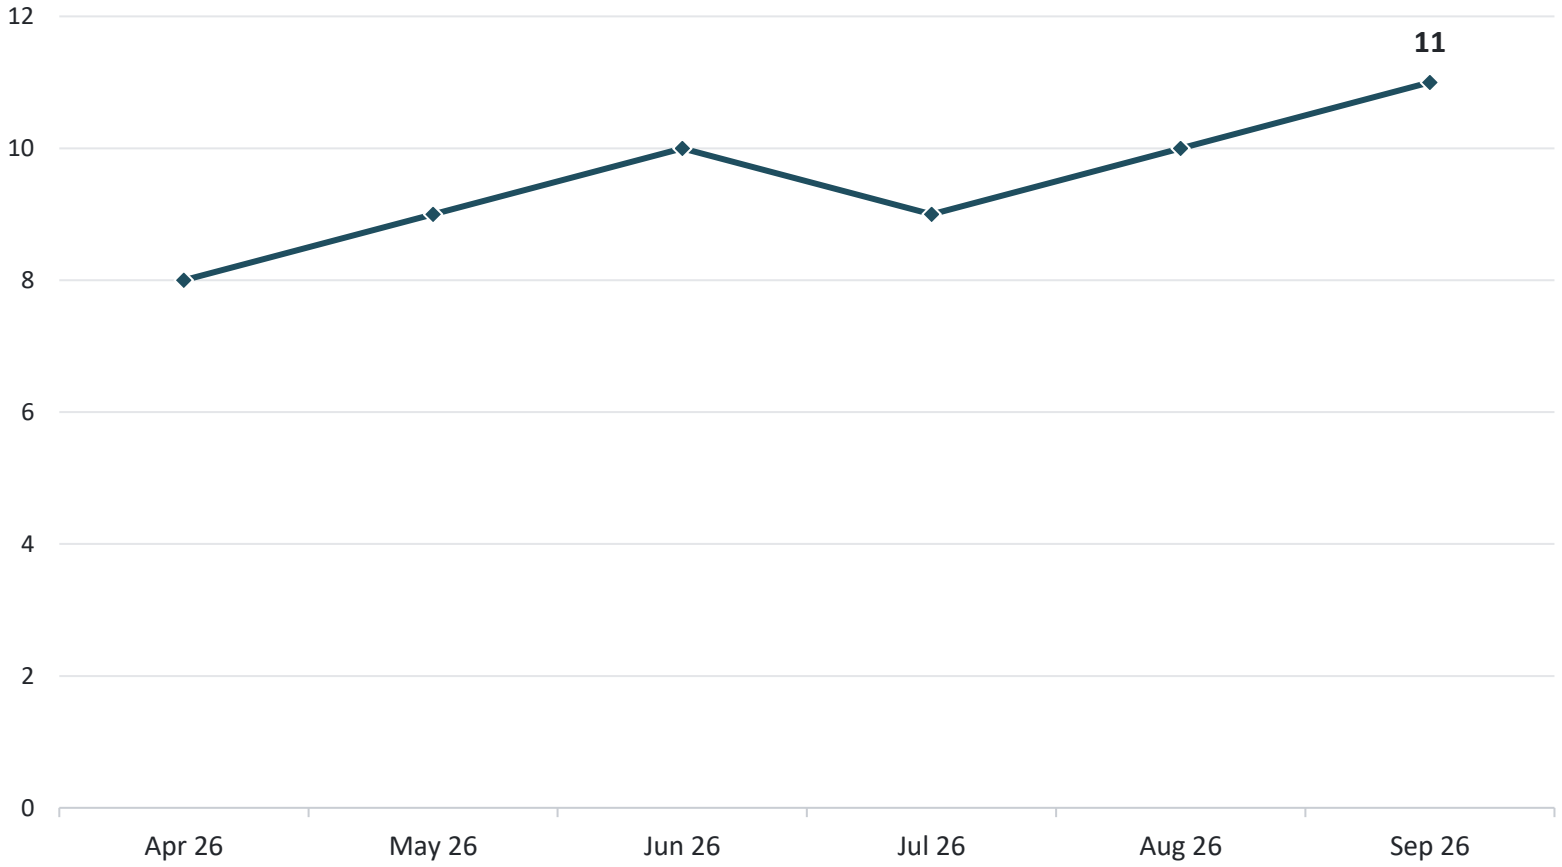

Parents reported a better stress measure

The reverse-scored average moved from 2.55 to 3.6, where higher means better.

20 participants answered both pre and post.

Follow-up tracking is still developing

By 2026-09, 11 families had the full comparable observation period for move-in tracking; this is not a move-in result.

Entered by staff. Latest month (2026-09): 11.

Respondents were families with children

100% of participants who answered reported children under 18 at home.

Share of the 24 participants who answered. Groups with fewer than 5 people are combined to protect privacy.

It's still hard some months but I know who to call now.

Encouraging signals, with important limits

1. Matched survey responses show reported short-term changes
2. The current results do not establish long-term housing stability
3. A 12-month housing-status result is not included here
4. Keep improving follow-up and cost reporting

OUR ASK

Sustain the supports around a move

1. Renew support for time-limited rent assistance
2. Keep move-in essentials and voluntary case management available
3. Strengthen follow-up on housing status and program costs

Thank you
